Edited by Bridget Griffen-Foley

AUSTRALIAN SCHOLARLY PUBLISHING

At this time of rapid and revolutionary change in modes of communication, A Companion to the Australian Media will provide the first comprehensive, up-to-date historical account of Australia's press, broadcasting and new media sectors.

Arranged in an accessible A–Z format will be more than 500 substantial articles focusing on both the history and contemporary practice of media corporations, individuals, industries, audiences, policy and regulation since the launch of Australia's first newspaper in 1803.

A Companion to the Australian Media will be essential reading, as well as a ready reference, for everyone interested in the dynamic world of the media, including practitioners, entrepreneurs, investors, lawyers, commentators, bloggers, historians and students.

Under the editorship of Australia's leading media historian, Professor Bridget Griffen-Foley, and guided by a distinguished Editorial Advisory Board, more than 200 media scholars, journalists and other industry players have been commissioned to write entries in their areas of specialty.

Articles include coverage of geographical regions, reporting and reviewing genres, key individuals and dynasties as well as flagship newspapers and broadcasting icons.
